

The Unknown Warriors

This is sung by everyone at the VE Day celebrations after one of the American G.I.'s suggests it lighting a candle for the unknown warriors. Everyone on the stage sings, each holding a single lit white candle.

Poppies float down from the ceiling onto the cast during the last verse. The candles are all blown out together on the last note from the trumpet.

Remember the unknown warriors
Wherever they may lay
Fallen on some battlefield
For us to live another day

Hail to the unknown warriors
For facing all our fears
Bravely fought for the freedom
We take for granted down the years

Honour the unknown warriors
They did not fall in vain
Their courage won the battle
May their memory remain

Salute the unknown warriors
Wherever they may lay
Fallen on some battlefield
For us to live another day

For us to live another day
